CHAPEL HOUSE PZ OPENS IN ENGLAND'S CORNWALL REGION

CORNWALL REGION

Text by Alyssa Bird | Photography by Anya Rice | August 18, 2015

The drawing room at Chapel House PZ, a boutique hotel in Penzance, England.

Located in the western portion of England's Cornwall peninsula, the town of Penzance is famous for its Mazey Day celebrations and the Golowan Festival, which take place every June. Within close proximity to the artistic culture of Newlyn and the breathtaking coastal area of Penwith, Penzance is the perfect base for exploring the idyllic region.

Luckily, a chic boutique hotel recently opened in the harborside town that offers a stylish setting to enjoy the area. Chapel House PZ is an intimate property that occupies a Georgian townhouse from 1790 overlooking Mount's Bay. With the help of firm Loci Architecture, owner Susan Stuart embarked on a two-year renovation of the building, which has served as a private residence to noble families, a shelter for evacuees during World War II, a lodging house, and most recently the Penzance Arts Club.

Whitewashed floors and a custom-made four-poster in a light-filled guest room.

The interiors, a vibrant mix of historic and modern, feature antiques and original elements—such as the windows and flagstone flooring—paired with streamlined, contemporary pieces in bold shades. Whitewashed surfaces, meanwhile, keep things fresh. Touches of gray, blue, and green recall the English Channel, and a rotating collection of contemporary works from the nearby Newlyn School of Art hangs in the public spaces. All six of the light-filled rooms have sea views, custom-made beds, contemporary furnishings, alpaca throws, and soaking tubs.

A rustic-chic guest room featuring a beamed ceiling and modern furnishings.

In addition to a charming dining room where guests can enjoy a drink, a meal, or some downtime, there's a lovely dining area complete with a garden and terrace overlooking the water. Stuart and her team serve four-course dinners using locally sourced, seasonal ingredients, from the fish to the wine to the sea salt. Food-focused programs include foraging weekends and children's cooking classes.

If activities such as sailing, kayaking, surfing, and fishing don't appeal, take a ferry to explore the isles of Scilly or drive an hour east to the Eden Project, a park and educational center in Bodelva containing biodomes filled with plant species found in the rain forest. And dog fans will be happy to hear that furry friends are welcome at the hotel.
